The problem is what interests all but beginners in typography. Its solution may be, and often is, moderately exciting; although if the problem is successfully solved no one perceives it has existed.

Daniel Berkeley Updike
Notes on the Merrymount Press
(1934)