The verbose-trad2 style

This is another traditional style which uses scholarly abbreviations like ibidem and idem. Despite its name, the ‘logic’ of this style is more closely related to styles like verbose-ibid and verbose-inote than to the rather special citation scheme implemented in the verbose-trad1 style.

Additional package options

The ibidpage option

The scholarly abbreviation ibidem is sometimes taken to mean both ‘same author + same title’ and ‘same author + same title + same page’ in traditional citation schemes. By default, this is not the case with this style because it may lead to ambiguous citations. With ibidpage=true a page range postnote will be suppressed in an ibidem citation if the last citation was to the same page range. With ibidpage=false the postnote is not omitted. Citations to different page ranges than the previous always produce the page ranges with either setting. The default setting is ibidpage=false.

Consider the following example citations

\cite[12]{cicero}
\cite[12]{cicero}
\cite[12]{worman}
\cite[13]{worman}

If ibidpage is set to true, the citations come out – shortened – as

Cicero, De natura deorum, p. 12
ibid.
Worman, The Cast of Character, p. 12
ibid., p. 13

The shortened result for ibidpage=false is

Cicero, De natura deorum, p. 12
ibid., p. 12
Worman, The Cast of Character, p. 12
ibid., p. 13

The dashed option

A case related to the definition of ibidem is the scope of the ibidem and idem replacements. By default, this style will only use such abbreviations if the respective citations are given in the same footnote or in consecutive footnotes. The point of this restriction is also to avoid potentially ambiguous citations. Here’s an example:

...\footcite{aristotle:anima}
...\footcite{aristotle:anima}
...\footnote{Averroes touches upon this issue in his \emph{Epistle on the Possibility of Conjunction}.}
...\footcite{aristotle:anima}
This could be rendered as follows:

2 Ibid.

3 Averroes touches upon this issue in his Epistle on the Possibility of Conjunction.

4 Ibid.

What does the ibidem in the last footnote refer to? The last formal citation, as given in the first and the second footnote (Aristotle), or the informal reference in the third one (Averroes)? Too avoid such citations, this style will only use ibidem and idem replacements if the respective citations are given in the same footnote or in consecutive footnotes:

2 Ibid.

3 Averroes touches upon this issue in his Epistle on the Possibility of Conjunction.

4 Aristotle, De Anima, op. cit.

Depending on your writing and citing habits, however, you may prefer the less strict ibidem and idem handling. You can force that by setting the package option strict=false in the preamble. It is still possible to mark a manually inserted discursive citation with \mancite when required:

...\footcite{aristotle:anima}
...\footnote{\mancite Averroes touches upon this issue in his Epistle on the Possibility of Conjunction.

...\footcite{aristotle:anima}

This will suppress the ibidem in the last footnote.

The citepages option

Use this option to fine-tune the formatting of the pages and pagetotal fields in verbose citations. When an entry with a pages field is cited for the first time and the postnote is a page number or a page range, the citation will end with two page specifications:

In this example, “125” is the postnote and “100–150” is the pages field (there are similar issues with the pagetotal field). This may be confusing to the reader. The citepages option controls how to deal with these fields in this case. The option works as follows, given these citations as an example:

\cite{key}
\cite[a note]{key}
\cite[125]{key}

* citepages=permit allows duplicates, i.e., the style will print both the pages/
* pagetotal and the postnote. This is the default setting:

citepages=suppress unconditionally suppresses the pages/pagetotal fields in citations, regardless of the postnote:

citepages=omit suppresses the pages/pagetotal in the third case only. They are still printed if there is no postnote or if the postnote is not a number or range:

citepages=separate separates the pages/pagetotal from the postnote in the third case:

The string “especially” in the third case is the bibliography string thiscite, which may be redefined.

The dashed option

By default, this style replaces recurrent authors/editors in the bibliography by a dash so that items by the same author or editor are visually grouped. This feature is controlled by the package option dashed. Setting dashed=false in the preamble will disable this feature. The default setting is dashed=true.

Hints

If you want terms such as ibidem to be printed in italics, redefine \mkibid as follows:

\renewcommand*{\mkibid}{\emph}
\footcite
